Oil, the major source of energy in the world today, has had a dramatic effect on the world's economy. Until quite recently, the demand for oil seemed unlimited. This enormous demand motivated several multinational companies to invest vast sums of money in locating and exploiting any large oil deposits that they could be found. Some of these multinationals became extremely wealthy, although the countries in which they found oil did not always have much of share in this new found wealth. However, oil-rich countries came to realize that if they acted together, their oil deposit could be a source of great power and wealth. Indeed, in 1973 the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries which together produced 56 per cent of the world's petroleum at that time, decided to act together to force an increase in the price of oil.
