- The guru observed the three men and listened to their angry exchanges. He soon understood the cause of their dispute. The three were residents of the town, but had been locked out as they were late in returning from some pleasure trip. One of them who was drunk, proposed that they should storm the gate and march into the town over the smashed metal plated doors. “Heroes that we are, this will be the right thing for us to do” he claimed. The second man who was under the influence of opium said that they should jump over the wall. “That would be great fun!” he insisted. As each disputed the wisdom of the other two, there was pandemonium. The guru silenced them. “Why don't each of you do what you would like to do?” he asked. More categorically he asked the first man to smash the doors and the second man to jump over the wall and the third man to pass through key hole.
